

Why i want to be an LNP?

My ambition to become an LPN actually evolved from when i was 12. At this age my grand father was in his 90s and he could barely do anything by himself. He often got sick and required continuous attention. My Uncles had to employ a nurse to take care of him. His nurse was living with him and each day i had to visit to see how he was doing. She was there through his death. I was overwhelmed and since then, I developed that love to care for those that are in need.

When I graduated from high school, i didn't have money to start nursing but then that passion in helping and caring lead me to go into a teaching course at The University of Bamenda, Cameroon, where after graduation I started teaching in my community and created a Summer Holiday program that was to help teach kids that were not doing well in Mathematics and English. This was a free program for all kids during their summer Holidays.

In 2018 my desire to become a nurse increased more as i was involved in an electric shock and while i was rushed to the hospital lying almost lifeless, I saw how caring the nurses were and their efforts which lead to my being alive this day. Since then i said to myself I have to become a nurse and save lives too. So when i came to the US in 2019, I immediately started giving care to the elderly, the sick and the disabled. I have been a volunteer at Our Father's Table (40 Boutelle St, Fitchburg, MA 01420) since December 2019, preparing, picking and serving food to the needy. I have had the training and certification in home health aide (HHA), CPR, CNA, Medical Office Assistant Certificate, safety care and Medication Administration. While working in different Nursing Homes, Rehabs and Group Homes for over two (2) years now, I witnessed that nurses, primarily LPN's are the backbones of long term care and rehab facilities, and provide exceptional care to the elderly in the last stages of their lives.

These experiences in my life has encouraged me more wanting to pursue a career as an LPN, so I can help others and feel good about it at the same time. I have found McCann Technical School the place to provide me with this knowledge. I intend to be an advocate for those who are in need, and I do believe one with a true caring and compassionate mind as myself, will provide excellent care to the less fortunate population.
